

ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY

New Zealand Energy Corp. is committed to responsible environmental practice and a high standard of environmental management. The corporation will ensure its activities comply with relevant environmental legislation and with industry best practices.

To promote and implement this policy New Zealand Energy Corp. will:

- Avoid, remedy or mitigate adverse effects of its operations on air, water, soil, plant and animal life and communities.
- Have regard to aspects of sustainable management of natural and physical resources.
- Actively monitor and audit compliance with regulatory and resource consent requirements.
- Consult with government, local authorities, and other regulatory agencies to assist with formulation of appropriate balanced rules, regulations and standards that will assist in safeguarding the environment.
- Acknowledge community concerns in respect of potential and actual adverse environmental effects of operations, and to work towards a satisfactory outcome for all.
- Actively liaise with Iwi to maintain awareness of cultural issues and concerns as to potential and actual effects of the corporation's projects.
- Adopt and implement best practice guidelines in various environmental risk management activities.
- Work to obtain the involvement and commitment of all employees and contractors in developing and applying this policy.
- Hold employees and contractors accountable for compliance with this policy and all rules or conditions that apply to our activities.
